

February 5, 2007

To Whom It May Concern:

Dave Robison and Scott Hammond have asked if I would write a letter of introduction and recommendation on behalf of Clearwater Builders; while this can be a chore, in this case it is a pleasure.

I met Roby and Scott, and many of the present members of Clearwater Builders, in 1993 when, as part of Three Season's Builders, they were building a house in Colchester that the architectural firm I worked for had designed. Four big, complex, very highly crafted houses and a barn followed, the most recent of which was completed in the spring of 2004.

Simply put, these are the finest builders I have worked with in the 35 years I have been involved in construction; I consider the projects we have done together to be the best of my career. The success of these projects is the result of a number of well developed skills: a very high level of construction knowledge and craftsmanship; the ability to adhere to demanding schedules and budgets; a broad knowledge of local suppliers and tradesmen, accurate coordination and management of multiple trades; and good will and a real concern for job harmony. Despite the pressures and emotions inherent in building houses, these have been happy jobs with happy outcomes. I would jump at the chance to work with them again.

Sincerely,

Stuart Hamilton
Senior Designer

