

August 25, 2007

Clear Water Builders     A Recommendation

My home in Vermont was constructed by Three Seasons Builders during the period of 1998 through 2000.

The house is a contemporary design using steel, wood, stone, and glass in a clean yet sophisticated manner. The house and its Architects, Truex Cullins & Partners, were selected by AIA Vermont for its excellence award in the category of Private Residence in 2000.

Subsequent to the retirement of the owner of Three Seasons Builders, some of the principals of this firm, formed the nucleus of a new company under the name of Clear Water Builders, to carry on the tradition of superb quality in home construction coupled with the highest standards of ethics and integrity.

Clear Water Builders continues to carry on with the practice of accepting no less than the best from themselves as well as their exceptional team of subcontractors. They persist in demanding that their customers are more than satisfied with the end product and ultimately get the home of their dreams.