

Josh Hahn Bio

Josh is the founder of Stone Bridge, LLC a consulting firm that specializes in integrating sustainability and education. Stone Bridge has worked with many schools and organizations on issues ranging from environmental master planning and strategy to curriculum development. Josh believes strongly that in order to solve complex environmental problems schools must teach habits of mind that encourage a systems or ecological approach that bridges the disciplines and departments within a traditional school context.

Prior to starting Stone Bridge, Josh finished his Ed.M. at Harvard Graduate School of Education with a concentration in school leadership. Prior to his work at Harvard Josh spent four years at The Lawrenceville School as the Aldo Leopold Fellow. While at Lawrenceville he developed and implemented a large-scale sustainability initiative that touched many aspects of school life. He also taught, coached and lived in residence halls and performed other duties associated with faculty at the school. Through his experience at Lawrenceville, Josh worked with many schools and associations to create models of sustainability and share best practice.

Prior to Lawrenceville, Josh worked as an educator for the Vermont Education for Sustainability Project at Shelburne Farms. He ran the school programs for Interlocken Center for Experiential Education (now Windsor Mountain), where he now sits on the advisory board. He is a graduate of Lawrence Academy, and his undergraduate degree is in Environmental Studies from The University of Vermont.
